Welfare Recipients and Genocide

Letter to the Editor:

I was profoundly moved by the Lt. Governor of South Carolina, Andre Bauer's, speech about not feeding strays or people, because feeding them causes them to breed.

I was moved to go vomit into my commode, to hear that he thinks genocide of a downtrodden group of people is okay. And starving women and children, who primarily fit into this category, is good politics. How far our nation and it's elected officials have come to think of themselves as God.

I see the same reasoning that great leader's, like Rome's Nero, and Germany's Hitler, in our leaders today. Genocide, insanity, above the law politics, financial destitution, and plain, good old fashioned stupidity.

If our illustrious, South Carolina Lt. Governor wants to rid our country of the ills of Welfare, then I will vote for the starvation of men, starting with the leaders of our country and sports stars.

I don't know if you will agree with me, but I am tired of supporting men in government offices, who do little or nothing for extremely large welfare checks, their mistresses expenses, unclaimed children, and especially feeding them to continue breeding. Yes, gentlemen, if you curtailed your breeding activities we wouldn't have all these social problems.

For instance, if you look into the Welfare group you will notice it consists mostly of women and children.

I can't imagine a woman wanting to live in sub-standard housing, eating from charity, clothing their children from thrift stores, waiting in long lines for HealthCare, and not being able to own a vehicle in order to go to work every day.

Yes, it is a woman's dream to be house-bound with the children men created every single day of her life, without a life-line of changing the circumstances.

I am sure when she married, she promised to do this when her man deserted her and the children or refused to support them.

I am a woman like a lot of readers of this paper, and I see things a bit differently from Mr. Bauer, I think solving our social problems is one step away.

If you are uncomfortable starving a group of men to death, then just castrate them.

Social Problem solved.

Less Safe on Obama's Watch

Letter to the Editor:

As a former naval intelligence officer on a high level staff (Top Secret Cryptographic clearance), I agree with President Obama that the breach of security associated with the Detroit-bound airliner is "totally unacceptable". The warning signs were there, but the intelligence community failed to recognize, analyze and disseminate the information. This is the same type of failure which led to the 9/11 attacks and the Ft. Hood massacre.

Although only a small percentage of Middle East inhabitants are terrorists, almost all of the terrorists emanate from Middle East countries. We have to pay much more attention to travelers to this country from the Middle East and a few other countries, and our Department of Homeland Security has to work with foreign airports to beef up their security operations. We need many more intelligence officials who are proficient in Arabic and who can penetrate al Qaida networks in various countries, including Iraq, Afghanistan, Pakistan and Yemen.

Unfortunately, the Bush Administration transferred a number of Yemini terrorists from Guantanamo Bay back to Yemen, and at least one of them was involved in the planning for the attack on the Detroit-bound airliner. President Obama wants to close down Guantanamo and transfer the terrorists to the U.S. mainland for prosecution. Will these terrorists be convicted of their crimes? Will they be executed? If not, how long will they stay in prison? Will they be eligible for parole? Will they spread their hate for the U.S. to other inmates? Why take a chance with these hard core terrorists? Keep them in Guantanamo.

We need President Obama to stop appeasing the leaders of countries that sponsor terrorism including Iran, Syria, and Somalia; and he has to cease bowing to leaders of the world, and appearing subservient to them. These actions are construed by terrorists as signs of weakness, which give the terrorists inspiration to attack us.

President Obama weakened the CIA operations, and the intelligence agencies in general, when he criticized the CIA for its interrogation techniques. Although some of these techniques might be unacceptable to the world community, we have to be able to somehow access information from captured terrorists. I believe the recent failures of our intelligence agencies to provide warnings of potential terrorist activities can be partially attributable to some apathy and lack of initiative within the intelligence community, and President Obama bears some responsibility for the climate of distrust among intelligence officials.

Janet Napolitano is not qualified to fill the position of Secretary of Homeland Security. We need a professional intelligence/security person in this critical position. Unfortunately most high level federal positions, including cabinet positions, go to unqualified politicians for pay-back for supporting the President during the campaign.

Note: The President was deeply involved and approved the people for these positions.

The U.S. is less safe on Obama's watch, and we could be susceptible to on-going terrorist attacks due to an appeasing and apologetic President, incompetent Secretary of Homeland Security, and weakened intelligence agencies.

P.S. Bring on the body scanners. At my age it could be exciting.
